Sen. Richard Shelby of Toyota, Honda & Mercedes Benz, and Sen. Bob Corker of Nissan speak out on the bailout of the Big 3 Automakers.

"They're not building the right products...I don't believe they've got good management. They don't innovate. They're a dinosaur in a sense."

"You haven't invested in product development. Your dealership levels all across the state might be really valuable to a foreign company coming in."

In other words Gentlemen, the Big 3 haven't been building all the sleek, smaller, lighter, agile and economical vehicles that the American public needs and wants, the way your companies have been doing, and they haven't been working toward those higher fuel economy standards that you voted against in the Senate.
